

A.C. Frieden Researches a Novel in Uruguay

PUNTA DEL ESTE, Uruguay (Jan. 4, 2013) – Novelist A.C. Frieden arrived in Punta del Este, Uruguay, for a writing retreat and also to hunt for interesting locations for an upcoming thriller. “Punta and other spots along the Uruguayan coast are not only beautiful, but unique and interesting for the spy novels I write,” said Frieden. “And having previously researched Montevideo, Colonia del Sacramento, Cabo Polonio and Punta del Diablo, it’s become easier to narrow down my remaining choices.”

Frieden also dined at the award-winning La Bourgogne restaurant, which will be featured in a scene in his new, soon-to-be-announced thriller series. “La Bourgogne is an exquisite culinary experience, with an elegant terrace under pine trees in a quiet residential area,” said Frieden, “and as Punta del Este’s best and most expensive restaurant, it’s frequented by Latin America’s rich and famous—making it a perfect place for a dramatic suspense scene.”
